An academic year of nursing is comprised of three eleven-week terms for Day option and three sixteen-week terms for Evening option. Each term consists of ten or fifteen weeks of instruction and the last week is reserved for finals and clinical evaluations. Both options are considered full time.

All nursing credits are semester credits. The term "credits," as assigned to nursing courses, is used for grading purposes and is not meant to imply transferable credits. College course credits are assessed for transferability by the receiving institution and advanced placement for nursing courses is under the purview of the receiving college.
